NEW U.S. COINS

U. S. Treasury Dept., Washington, D. C.

What Are the New Dimes And Quarters Made Of?

The new dime and quarter are three layered coins. They are the country's first non-silver coins above five cents value, made necessary by a world silver shortage. The outer faces of both are 75 percent copper and 25 percent nickel—the same alloy used for the 5c piece. The cupronickel faces of the new dime and quarter are bonded to a core of pure copper, giving them a new look in United States coinage: coins with a distinctive copper colored edge. This construction makes them compatible in all uses, including vending machines, with the silver coinage.

What Is the New Half Dollar Like?

The new half dollar is also a three layered coin. But it is the silver standard bearer of the new coinage. Its outer faces are an alloy of 80 percent silver and 20 percent copper. The inner core is 21 percent silver and 79 percent copper. The 80 percent silver content of the faces of the new half dollar make it almost indistinguishable from the traditional 90 percent silver 50 cent piece. The new half dollar has an overall 40 percent silver content.

Do the New Coins Have Different Designs?

No. The new dime, quarter and half dollar have the same designs as the old ones. All new coins — the dime, quarter, and half dollar — are dated 1965 and will continue to be dated 1965 until all shortages disappear.

Why Did the United States Greatly Reduce the Use Of Silver in Coins?

Primarily because there is a world shortage of silver. The artistic and industrial demand for silver, to say nothing of the use of silver in coinage, far exceeds the amount of silver being mined.

Another important reason is the ever-increasing demand for coins by an expanding American population.

The silver for the United States coins has come for many years from the Treasury's silver stock. But to

The Huguenot - Walloon Tercentary half dollar — This U.S. Commemorative coin honored the 300th anniversary of the settlement of our Middle Atlantic States. The pioneers left to escape religious persecution but this issue became the catalyst that embittered and divided various churches in 1924 when the coins were released.

The Half Dollar That Caused Friction

By Lee Martin

The idea behind issuing commemorative half dollars was a simple one. If a project existed that had merit, the Treasury would authorize the manufacture of half dollars bearing a symbolic design. The coin would be available to the sponsor for the 50c face value and then it would be resold to collectors or people who felt that the occasion involved was important enough to be retained as a souvenir. The premium paid for the coin over face value was to be used for charitable purposes.

Shop Looted By Electronic Entry

The Audubon Coin Company of Baton Rouge, La. suffered a burglary over this past week-end. The thieves blew the safe and the walk-in vault and made off with about $50,000 worth of coins, mostly Mexican. It was reported to Pace that the burglars used some sort of electronic device to short or bypass the burglar alarm. This loss was not covered by insurance. Anyone having quantities of Mexican coins offered to them from people they don't know should contact the authorities at once.

By Del Ford

Rights reserved on this article. Coin papers may use in its entirety, but may not quote from context in part.

Del Ford reports he received three specimens of the 1964 (P) Cent for examination. We quote the results of his detailed examination

(1) All three coins are within one half grain of the normal weight of 48 grains.

(2) All three coins are approximately one-half millimeter larger in diameter than normal cents.

(3) All three coins have roughened, raised, irregular shaped areas in two locations on the reverse. One such area extending from the "D" of United to the "S" of States, thence thru the "E" of E Pluribus to the top of the Memorial Building and continuing along the building roof to the point of beginning is approximately 3 millimeters in diameter. Another such area extends from the "E" of Cent upward to the Memorial steps and is approximately 3 millimeters wide and 4 millimeters in length.

(4) The reverse of one specimen has faint doubling of the letters "F" and "RICA" and of the right side of the Memorial Building. The reverse of another specimen has parts of most of the letters of the legend, motto and "ONE CENT" partially erased. This leaves the uprights of the "N" and "T" of Cent about half their regular thickness. The reverse of the third specimen appears normal except for the roughened and slightly raised areas mentioned under item (3) above.

(5) Each of the three cents has "Ghost" of Lincoln on reverse. On normal

Inflation Threat Thrusts Speculators Into Market

By Brad Mills

Purchase of coins as a hedge against inflation has been greatly stimulated by world monetary developments. Sharp investors and speculators have rushed into the market to accumulate any numismatic material that may be affected favorably from higher bullion prices. Obviously silver and gold have been chiefly sought with the thought and perhaps the hope that an upward price spiral is in the offing.

Still another series in strong demand is the scarce type coin that must be used in the completion of a series. Collectors believe that inflation will greatly increase the value of all prime rarities in both regular and commemorative issues.

A favorite pastime of frugal numismatists is the constant search for "sleepers," or neglected coins of seeming potential. This trend has been greatly accentuated by recent boom developments and the steady whisper that inflation remains just around the corner. Many of the fairly plentiful coins that were exploited and pushed up out of all reason have retreated to lower levels or have become static in demand. Collectors generally are looking hard and long for coins that will either weigh out on a bullion basis or look scarcer and better on an inflated market.

Currently the greatest question mark is gold. The so-called foreign element, now flushed with gold reserves, is pushing hard for higher bullion prices. Such an increase would automatically and instantly devalue the dollar from a monetary standpoint, and would give such nations as France, West Germany and Italy much greater dollar equivalents in a diluted form.

Heavy, common date gold coins have been selling at less than 50 percent above bullion value. An increase to $50 per ounce of gold would doubtless push the price of common gold coins to much greater levels. However, there is no reason at the moment to believe the United States wants higher gold prices, and no jump is anticipated for the immediate future. Such a step would be highly inflationary.

The old theory that Russia would be the greatest winner from higher gold prices persists from some quarters, since she has untold thousands of forced laborers producing it.

The great hoard of silver dollars now being held by thousands of collectors, investors and speculators seems to be in a status quo position. The tremendous rush to buy these dollars by the bag has somewhat subsided, due to an unsettled silver situation and a wait-and-see attitude of the collector of single coins. The high bullion value of dollars in relation to cost has been a strong incentive to buy, but carrying charges and the fact that they are not scarce has had a sobering effect on many investors who purchased heavily at more than face value.

However, the present silver market is strong, and the silver dollar should fare very well with increased bullion prices. It certainly is not possible to count silver out as an investment possibility, at least where acquisition is at a favorable level.

Recent reports that gold prices would be advanced greatly stimulated activity in all gold coins. The rush was in almost a blind fashion for a few days, but subsided some after no official increases were posted.

The thought of continued inflation remains in the mind of the collector who has seen prices increase up to four-fold in a decade. He continues to search out records for possible enhancement groups. Such prevalence among the current numismatists and investors contrasts sharply with the almost inspired purchases of the collectors of 30 years ago. In the old days a coin was acquired largely from a hobby standpoint, as contrasted with the present mixed elements that collect for numerous reasons. However, the entry of new blood has brought fresh ideas into a hobby that could have been going stale.

Undoubtedly the constant shopping around for shrewd purchases is the most conspicuous trend today. Coin shows are filled with collectors who are trying to outguess the market. The serious numismatist also is present and plugs along to increase his holdings. The speculator finally finds a few goodies for the future, and the new collector buys some circulated sets to take home and admire. All in all the coin market continues to be active, but everyone is trying to guess the future.

NUMISMATIC REVIEW

Somewhere in Life

Somewhere in life the eagle soars
Along air currents high;
He swoops and dives to make his kill
As daylight fades and night draws nigh.

As simple as sparks can go away
A new birth comes of age.
All lives are listed in the book of time
If but on a single page.

Somewhere in life is the beginning of collections many,
Of frogs and rocks and coins for sure
With ancients, with crowns, or something better
In copper, in silver, or gold so pure.

Somewhere in life a PROOF I'll own
With mirror surface and satin sheen,
With full relief and edges sharp!
'Tis truly, the finest specimen seen.

Somewhere in life, my summer almost gone,
I'll pass along these COINS so dear,
To think, to dream of loves gone bye
And reminisce of YESTERYEAR.

My silvery orbs, my golden discs
Dissolve with my last breath.
Somewhere in life my GOD awaits
To take me at my death.

Canadian Investments

By Maurice M. Gould

In the Nov. 5th issue Mr. Gould's article on Cuban Pesos referred to "21 Pesos with plain edge" . . . this should read "2100" . . . Ed.

I have just returned from a week in Montreal and as always, it is a chance to see my many friends and catch up on Canadian numismatics. I visited a number of firms, some interested in collector's material and foreign coins, as well as the ones primarily involved with investments.

First, I believe the only newspaper in the country which daily lists, on the financial pages, in a section called "Coin Market" the current quotations on investment material, is in Montreal, Canada. Listed are the Canadian prooflike sets from 1954 to date, with mintages and prices; the prooflike dollars, also from 1954 to date, with the same information; uncirculated rolls from the 01c to the $1 denomination, from 1954 to date; and uncirculated bags, 1961 through 1965. Advertisements are also seen offering coins as an investment and there is no doubt that Montreal has as controversy hopped on the bandwagon.

The controversy involved can best be illustrated by the fifty cent piece named the Huguenot-Walloon Tercentary. In 1624, our Middle Atlantic States were settled by some refugees from religious persecution. These hardy individuals were French speaking Belgians known as Walloons and a number of French emigres. All were known as Huguenots. (The French word for Protestants).

The Council of Churches of Christ in America became the sponsors of this coin and immediately saw reaction by members of other religious faiths because the approval of this coin by Congress appeared to show some partiality. Of course this was not the case as other faiths had the same opportunity to request a coin if they so desired. Unfortunately before the hubbub could die down the design became known and from that point on, the coin was doomed in the eyes of many prospective buyers. The obverse featured dual portraits of two heroes who were important to the Huguenots but had been dead for many years at the time of the arrival of the pioneers. The reverse of the coin did show an old full masted vessel known as the Nieu Nederland that brought some of the original pioneers.

Congress had authorized a mintage of 300,000 coins but only 142,080 were ever made. Of that number 55,000 halves were put into circulation because of little demand. So many of the coins are circulated that price lists always give prices for both new and used coins.

The engraver of the coin was the man who made the Morgan dollars that appeared during the 1878-1921 era. The portraits of Admiral Coligny and William the Silent are somewhat stilted and rather unreal but because the subjects lived during a pre-photography era and during a phase when artists generally neglected the school of realism, so it is understand-provide more and more Americans with more and more coins requires more and more silver. In recent years, demand for coins has grown so fast that, at current rates of coin production, the Treasury's silver supply would last only another three years.

To avoid coin shortages, it therefore became necessary to reduce our dependence upon silver in our coinage.

Couldn't New Supplies of Silver Be Increased?

Extensive study of this question indicated that it was not practical to hope for increased mining of silver in anything like the huge amounts needed to continue a silver coinage.

What Will Become of Our Silver Coinage?

Production of our traditional 90 percent silver coins continued while the new coins were introduced, building the circulated supply of silver coins to some 13 billion pieces. The silver coins are to circulate side-by-side with the new coins for the life of the coins, usually about 25 years.

Are the New Coins Legal Tender?

Yes, they are full legal tender, just as valuable, as money, as the silver coins.

Are Silver Dollars Now Being Minted?

No, silver dollars are not being minted and there are no present plans for minting them. But the silver dollar remains as a part of the United States coinage—unchanged since the founding of the nation, as a 90 percent silver coin.

How Many New 25c Coins Are Now in Circulation?

The first of the three new coins — dime, quarter and half dollar — authorized by the Coinage Act of 1965 to go into use was the new quarter. During the week that began Monday, November 1, 1965, the 36 Federal Reserve Banks and branch banks throughout the country scheduled distribution of 230 million of the new, non-silver 25c pieces to commercial banks for public use. The mint's plans called for further additions to supplies of the new coin at the rate of a quarter of a billion pieces a month. This high rate of production — as many quarters every three months as ever before produced in a year — will be kept up until a sufficient stock exists to satisfy all able that Morgan's renditions should be so poor. After all, his original subject matter must have been obscure.

In this day of absolute separation of church and state, the coin that blended the two and caused so much disagreement is now a very important member of every collector's Commemorative set. It retails for about $30 uncirculated and when available is quickly purchased. The only controversy that exists today is whether the coin is correctly graded and the only regret is that the entire authorization was never minted.

requirements for quarters.

What About the New 10c and 50c Pieces?

Production of the new dime and half dollar was scheduled to commence in late 1965 to permit the build-up of stocks large enough for introduction of these coins to public use in the first half of 1966.

Will the New Coins Last As Long As the Old Silver Ones?

Yes, perhaps even longer. This is indicated by extensive wear tests made on new coins before they were adopted.

Have Other Countries Also Adopted Non-Silver Coins?

Yes. Most countries have long since ended or drastically reduced the use of silver in their coinage.

Will the New Coins Operate in Vending Machines?

The new coins were engineered to duplicate exactly the electrical properties of existing silver coins — that is why they are three-layered coins. Therefore, they will function in all coin vending machines, even in those with sensing devices set to accept only coins with the electrical properties of almost pure silver.

Canadian Investments

much activity with this type of numismatics as any city in North America.

Interest in coin collecting is enhanced considerably by a weekly television and radio program, excellently presented by Fred Samuels of Van Horne Sales Ltd.

The greatest interest at the moment is the 1965 Canadian dollars. This is the hottest item of anything offered, and with four distinct varieties, there is a clamor by many to invest in these coins. One company with whom I spoke had orders for 89 bags of the 1965 dollars, so one can see how easily whatever is available can be absorbed in a very short period.

Many of these coins are going to the United States, as there are quite a number of investors South of the Border, who feel that Canadian coins have as great or a greater potential than U. S. material.

Foreign Coins

Dr. Kenneth Gaver of Collectors Research, one of the most outstanding firms devoted to foreign coins exclusively, told me that business is booming on the inexpensive and moderate priced foreign coins. He showed me the tremendous number of orders that were coming in every day and I am sure this is due to the efficiency and reliability of this firm. Their system is amazing as they have over a million foreign coins in stock and yet they can easily put their hands on any coin when needed.

A sideline of this firm is foreign paper money, which is also on the rise, and Wayne Jacobs, a knowledgeable specialist in this field, handles this material.

One unusual side feature of this business is the building of a nice foreign stamp collection by the Gavers from the mail which comes in from every area of the world. It is a stamp collector's Paradise, as parcels shipped to them must have high values of stamps on them.

Churchill Crown

In spite of the disappointment evinced by the appearance of the Churchill Crown, the obverse, with Queen Elizabeth, is well struck and excellently done. There is talk of a new striking to be made with a higher relief on the reverse.

There were long queues of people waiting in line to get these coins when they first made their appearance in the banks. Everyone was obliged to sign and there was only one piece to a customer as long as the supply held out.

When the banks ran out of these coins, the customers were notified that there would be an auction on them the following week, at which time they would have an opportunity to bid on them, when the supply was replenished.

A Numismatic Library

From time to time, you will notice that I will stress the value of a good library, whether you are a collector or dealer. Hundreds of times it has saved me many hours of work at a library, telephone calls, or checking with other dealers or collectors. Coin books can make money for you whether buying or selling, and for those of you particularly interested in investment material, the past few years has seen quite a number of books appear which specialize in investments in coins, and when you add your weekly issue of Pace to them, you have about all the information you need right at your fingertips.

Personally, I have always looked upon my library as a good sound investment. Once the books go out of print, a book which may have cost you $5 at the original price, can easily jump up to $25 or $35.

Continental Currency

The Colonial Paper Money series has been dormant for many years, but I have noticed a great deal of activity and interest at recent Conventions and auctions.

Arnold Perl, the well-known producer of television shows, whose excellent collection is now coming on the market, will make many rare items available in this field. New records will probably be set for rare pieces and the fact that Whitman and several other publishers are preparing books in this field, also spices interest in these pieces.

Foreign Proof Sets

There do not seem to be as many foreign proof sets in the planning stage as there were last year. Probably a great deal of this has to do with the new sets not increasing in value as quickly as they did in the past.

I hope that all countries issuing Proof Sets for the first time will look into the mechanics and procedures thoroughly and actually produce or have produced for them a set comparable to our Proof Sets. Many thousands of collectors have been extremely disappointed in the past when ordering Proof Sets and have had to wait long periods and then have received coins which in some cases were not even uncirculated. Proof sets have come through with planchet defects or clips missing and in many cases, were not good enough for a regular collection of coins.

The countries who will take pains now to assist the collector and take care of his orders promptly and properly, are the ones which will receive good will and business in the future.

MIDAS SAYS: "It's All In Your Point of View!"

The young couple was standing in the doorway of the nursery, looking at their new baby, peacefully sleeping in his new crib. Said the wife, cuddling closer to her handsome hubby: "Isn't it wonderful?" After a few moments pause, the new father said: "I'll never be able to understand how they can sell a crib like that for $4.95!"

Well, we will bet some of you look at the list of fine coins in our ad and wonder how Midas does it. We believe coins are worth just so much and are constantly striving to offer conservatively graded coins at reasonable prices. You no longer need to look longingly at coins you need but with hesitation because of high prices. TRY US!! See how inexpensive it really is to complete your sets!

MIDAS BONUS COINS

You may order any one or all of the following Midas Bonus Coins with any $10.00 order for other material in this ad.

MILLION DOLLAR profit for our clients

We like to think that we have made our clients over a million dollars on material that they have purchased through us during the past two years (actually the figure is probably nearer two million.)

Yes, on our volume which has run into the millions over the past several years, we note with pride that investors who have followed our recommendations have prospered 10-1.

As further evidence of our accuracy all of our clients to whom we offered guaranteed investments over a year ago have shown profits exceeding the 8% which we guaranteed them.

We have all the advancements expected of a modern coin or stock broker, e.g., teletypewriters, four telephone lines, photocopy and duplicating machines (we have over 10,000 investors receiving our monthly market report), vault facilities which we inherited from the bank that is leasing us our building, plus large stocks of coins and supplies to fill your every numismatic need. We place selected clients in scarce and choice numismatic material for investment purposes ranging from $500 to $50,000 almost weekly. Give us a try! Your bank account will be glad you did.

We have financing available for any amount either on a monthly reduction basis or on a margin as one expects on stocks. We charge the same low prices whether your purchase be for cash or trade.

MEXICAN SECTION

The Coins of Mexico

By Joseph C. Wozniak

For the numismatist, the collector of Mexican coins — and for those who love history, culture and intrigue, I recommend the magazine "Esta Semana" (This Week). This magazine is free. It gives dates of historical events, and their meaning — both in Spanish and in English. It also provides the routes from city to city, indicates places of interest, hotels, fiesta days, and guides to help you find coins to buy.

For the numismatist, it also gives cities and towns where coins were minted years ago. Many of you will recognize names such as Culiacan, Durango, Hermosillo, Oaxaca, Zacatecas, among others.

It also gives the market places which, for the collector, can give many "leads" to the coins of Mexico.

A copy of "Esta Semana" can be obtained free at most border hotels or airlines in Mexico, or at hotels on the U.S. side of the border. You may wonder why I mention this magazine. It gives the numismatist some of the following information.

1. Where to go, what to see, where to fish.

2. Important cities and towns, with maps and routes.

3. Current and historical events.

4. The market places (mercados) to find coins.

5. Values of money — coke 4c, beer 1 peso (8c) etc.

6. English/Spanish translations.

7. Automobile services, and banks — foreign exchange and numismatic intrigue.

And, there are many 'senoritas bonitas' (beautiful girls). Some of the finest and most beautiful folk music in the world is played by the "Mariachis." If you ever buy Mariachis music, ask for "Lindo Michoacan," "La Marcha," "Zacatecas" or "Viva Mexico." You'll get a happy surprise.

But numismatics is not necessarily having a collection, or buying coins — it is life itself. History, culture, and knowledge of the coin; its place of origin, the values it had at the time of issue — all these things are meaningful.

It is for many of these reasons that there has been a very rapid growth in the number of collectors of Mexican coins — in the United States, and throughout the world. Over a million holders for type sets, year mint sets, 1c sets, and sets for the various denominations have been manufactured. Sets of books on Mexican coins, price guides, and trends and other albums are on the increase also.

In the next articles we will tell you more on certain coins of interest, why particular Mexican coins have seldom been seen in BU, why certain denominations have never been seen in certain areas of Mexico.

Another Opinion

cents examined for comparison the outline of the "Ghost of Lincoln" appears to be slightly depressed. On these three specimens the outline of the "Ghost of Lincoln" appears to be raised above the plane surface in some portions of the outline.

(6) Two of the three specimens have one additional strike and the third specimen has evidence of a third strike. All extra strikes are rotated counter-clockwise and are weak. Except for the third strike on one coin, which shows faint doubling of the "64" of the date, the other additional strikes are rotated approximately 23 degrees counter-clockwise. Each shows a faint and partial doubling of the motto, the head of Lincoln and the date. Two specimens show a partial extra "Liberty" on Lincoln's coat. Each shows an additional date — 1964.

(7) The rims on both obverse and reverse appear normal when compared with other uncirculated cents. The edges of two of the coins bear small "hash" marks, similar to the reeding on the dime, and extend about one-third of the distance across the edges. One coin bears four such parallel marks and another five. The third piece has four similar but fainter markings.

(8) There are no indications of re-engraving on any portion of any of these cents. Two of the coins examined appeared to have been cleaned (dipped).

(9) The device (die) which imposed the additional strikes upon these coins was badly worn as the extra strikes are weak and flat, rather than rounded and raised as a normal striking.

Conclusions:

An examination of three specimens of double struck cents dated 1942, 1944 and 1959, which are in my possession, reveals very marked differences in many of the characteristics outlined above, i. e.:

(1) None are greater in diameter than normal except when the second strike occurred partly outside the collar.

(2) None have the roughened, raised areas which are present on each of the three 1964 cents examined.

(3) None have the peculiar erasure of parts of the legend, etc., which are present on the 1964 cents examined.

(4) None have the unusual "grip" marks which are present on the edges of the 1964 cents examined, as outlined in paragraph 7 above.

(5) None have flat, weak letters and numerals on the second strikes — as did the three specimens of 1964 cents.

Coin Exchange Transactions

BU ROLL PRICES AS OF WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1965

The BID and ASKED prices listed on this page were taken directly from the prices shown on the teletype, and represent wholesale prices at which coins were traded at or were offered at during the week of November 8th. Of course there are some items that had several different prices both bid and asked, and we have done our best to average these items so as to give our readers the best picture possible. We have tried to ignore ridiculous bids and offers to keep the prices true. For instance, a certain roll might be actively traded in at between $95.00 and $100.00 and we have noted many transactions around these figures. Naturally we will ignore a bid offer of $75.00 or a sell offer of $125.00 on this roll as these offers are not in line at all and would just confuse the picture. REMEMBER, THESE ARE TRANSACTIONS BETWEEN DEALERS. RETAIL PRICES ARE HIGHER.

CASHDAN'S COIN COMMENTS

Holiday in Mexico

Part III

While we were being indoctrinated into the ways of life in Mexican prisons, the wheels of "Justice" in Mexico were slowly turning. The judge to whom our appeal was assigned finally got back from his vacation around the first of March. By the middle of March he reached his decision, which, in essence, was that we were not guilty of fraud, but we might be guilty of attempt to defraud. Our case was therefore sent back to judge number one, Gamboa, but the charges were changed to attempt to defraud, an offense that is bondable in Mexico. This happened on a Thursday, and according to Mexican law, Judge Gamboa had twenty four hours to set our bonds.

Our attorney called on Gamboa Friday morning and was told that he was too busy to see him. He waited around for several hours, and finally the judge's secretary told him that he would be able to see him Saturday morning, and at that time he would set the bonds. Saturday morning again our attorney tried to see the judge, and was kept waiting for over two hours. He finally got disgusted and just got up and started into the judge's office. He found that the judge had just sneaked out the back door, but he was able to overtake him and insist that bond be set, even though the legal time limit had already elapsed, our attorney had to catch Gamboa in order to make him comply with the law and set our bonds.

Bonds Set

Gamboa set the bonds at 550,000 pesos on each one of us, or $44,000.00 in U.S. for this charge of attempt to defraud. To show you the bias of this judge towards us, the bond usually set for homicide in Mexico is from 5,000 to 20,000 pesos ($400.00 to $1,600.00). At any rate, the bond was set, but it was too late on Saturday to do anything about it as the bonding companies were closed on Saturday afternoon.

It is different in Mexico than it is in the United States when it comes to posting bond. You cannot post a bond direct to the court. You post the bond to a bonding company, and they in turn post it to the court for you. It goes without saying that they get a nice fee for doing this.

Well, Monday morning our attorney went with all our wives to the bonding company to find out what was necessary. It turned out that they would accept property bonds on the three Mexicans that were in with me, but for me they said it would be necessary to furnish a bond backed by a bank in the United States. To make sure exactly what was required, we had my attorney in Fort Worth phone the bonding company so that he could arrange everything to their satisfaction.

My three companions were bailed out that Monday afternoon, and we all figured that I would join them on the outside within the next two days as my Fort Worth attorney had phoned back saying that he was arranging all the necessary papers and that he would fly down with them on Tuesday. This being the case, I told my companions that there was no sense in leaving the ice chest, stove, etc., just for a day or two, so they packed and carted off a lot of the things and the rest we just gave away to the other prisoners. All that I kept was my mattress and pillow, and just a few of my clothes.

Delay

Things were finally looking up, and I knew that I would be out in a couple of days. I should have known better though, as the Mexicans are masters at giving people the run around.

When my attorney arrived from Fort Worth with the bond and all the necessary papers that he was told to bring over the phone, the Mexican bonding company would not accept it. They stated that it would be necessary to have the bond written by a bonding company in the U.S. and guaranteed by a bank on top of that. Frustrated, my attorney returned to Fort Worth.

I was more than frustrated myself, and believe me, for the first time in my life I really knew what it felt like to really want to hurt someone. I believe that if anyone remotely connected with me being held in that prison was on the scene at that time, I would have done something drastic. By this time I had learned to curse quite well in Spanish, and curse them all I did, in both languages. This was not the panacea I sought, but it served to let off some steam.

Delay Again

About ten days later, a professional bondsman from Fort Worth came down with what we thought to be all the necessary equipment. He left the following day talking to himself. It seems that the Mexican bonding company had by this time decided that the only acceptable bond for me would be U.S. dollars deposited with them in the full amount of $44,000.00.

I might mention that in the interim, my companions who had been released tried to post a property bond for me, as they owned quite a bit of property in Mexico, well over the value placed on me by Gamboa. This was not acceptable.

It all boiled down to cold cash, and I did not possess $44,000.00 in cold cash, but we figured that in a couple of weeks we could raise the money by selling off and pawning a lot of my stock of coins. Of course this takes time, and by this time every day seemed to me longer than the next. The uncertainty is much harder to take. If I had been told that I was going to have to spend a definite amount of time in jail, I would have just resigned myself to spending the time there and it would have been much easier. The way it happened, however, expecting each week to be my last one there, continually receiving assurances that I would be out shortly, really took a lot out of me. It got so I couldn't eat or sleep. I lost over 30 pounds during that period.

While this was going on, my friends on the outside were not idle. They, and my attorney, realized that Gamboa was so biased that we didn't stand a chance of having a trial for at least a year, and that in his eyes we were guilty, and would remain guilty until Hell froze over. The only avenue open was to appeal to a higher court and take the case away from Gamboa. This was started about the end of March, and our attorney pushed for an early hearing.

I mentioned previously that "Justice" was extremely slow in Mexico, and every day that I was in prison I learned of more instances of men who had been in jail for up to seven years without a final disposition of their cases.

This has nothing to do with me, but you might be interested to know that there was an American in our cell block, David Kaplan, who had been sentenced to 29 years for murder. Whether he did or didn't do it is no concern of mine, but I do want you to know that he was convicted of murder in Mexico — but without the benefit of a corpus delecti. That's right, they could never produce the body of the man they say he killed, yet he was convicted and sentenced to 29 years. The prison was full of Mexican murderers, and since I had nothing to do, I made a survey and found out that the average sentence for them was 8½ years. There seems to be a connection there someplace, because the people with the least amount of money, or rather those who cannot afford to have lawyers, usually got lighter sentences. The ones with money usually seem to get bled dry before they can get off.

Corruption

One very important privilege that was accorded me in prison was receiving a long distance phone call each day. In this manner I was kept abreast of the developments that were taking place in Fort Worth relative to raising the money for my bond. Of course most people have a pretty good idea of how corrupt things are in Mexico, and by this time my bank was well aware of this fact. They told me that "for my own good" they would not advance any money to be put on deposit in Mexico because I would never get it back and that I couldn't afford a loss like that. By this time, however, I was ready to lose the $44,000.00 if I had to, just in order to get out of that damned country.

PCDE To The Rescue

By the end of April most of the money had been gotten together, but we were still about $10,000.00 short of the total. I was desperate, and when I talked to Fort Worth I asked that an SOS for help be put on the teletype to my dealer friends all over the country. The response was instantaneous and very much appreciated. Mr. Tom Wass, the president of the Professional Coin Dealers Exchange (PCDE), phoned me from New York and told me what was going on. He also told me that he was taking charge of the fund that the dealers were contributing to help with my release, and that he was sending Mr. Herman Pressman, the noted Cleveland attorney who is also a coin collector, to Fort Worth and from there to Mexico City to help with my release. This was the second time that Mr. Pressman had come to Mexico on my behalf.

I neglected to mention that early in February, Mr. Jonah Shapiro of Syracuse Coin Company, had hired Mr. Pressman to fly down to Mexico City to see if there was anything he could do to help me. On the February morning that Mr. Pressman visited me at the prison, by coincidence, Miguel Munoz, the president of the Mexican Numismatic Society, and my Mexican attorney were there at the same time. We had quite a confab. Mr. Munoz by this time had found out the true facts of what had happened, and assured us that Sergio Torres Martinez was dropping the charges against us. He also apologized for the way I was being treated in Mexico. My attorney told Mr. Pressman "it was just a matter of a couple of weeks before he would be able to secure our release."

and that "there was nothing at all that Mr. Pressman could do." He also said that anything that Mr. Pressman might try to do would only hurt my case as American attorneys were considered outsiders in Mexico and would only serve to "muddy the water."

If I knew then what I know now, I never would have asked Mr. Pressman to lay off and go home. but I was convinced that I would be out in a couple of weeks and didn't want to start any trouble. So, like a fool, I thanked Mr. Pressman, asked him to thank Mr. Shapiro for me, and sent him on his way sure that I would be out in a couple of weeks.

U. S. Gov't. Aid

I don't think I mentioned that I received frequent visits from the U.S. Consul while I was in prison. I had been doing a lot of thinking about my case, and as far as I had it figured, I was being held illegally by Mexico. I told the Consul one day that the item that they were holding me for was the article that appeared in Pace prematurely announcing the proof sets. I remember the very words that I said to the Consul on this occasion, "Let's say for the sake of argument that I am guilty. What am I guilty of in Mexico? The article that I am being held for writing was written in the United States, published in a U.S. newspaper, and all the checks were sent from the United States to an-

Another Opinion

(6) It is my considered opinion that the three 1964 P cents have had the additional strikes imposed upon them after leaving the Mint for the following reasons:

(1) A cent which is double struck at the Mint will not be greater in diameter than a normally struck cent, unless the second strike occurs outside the collar.

(2) A roughened, raised area will not be present on either reverse or obverse of a cent which is double struck at the Mint.

(3) A cent which is double struck at the Mint may have partial erasure of the design or lettering, but such erasure will conform to the rotation had on the opposite side.

(4) A coin which is double struck at the Mint will not have "grip" or "hash" marks on the edge.

(5) Flat weak numerals will not be the result of a second striking applied at the Mint.

To the best of my knowledge, the United States State Department never lifted a finger to try to get me released from the clutches of Mexico. It seemed to me like the main job of the State Department was to keep the Mexicans happy so they would continue to accept the money we send to them. All I received was words of encouragement — "Have patience, be calm, these things take time down here."

I don't like to keep wandering off the track, but if I don't put these things down when I think of them, I might never get back to them, but readers, you have patience too — these things take time. Meanwhile, don't visit Mexico until I conclude my story next week.

(6) These cents could not be the result of a shifted hub die because none of the three specimens have the additional strikes in exactly same location.

It is stated in a recent reprint from an un-named publication that 1964 Multiple Struck cents have been found in parking meter money in Oklahoma. This apparently a reference to a paragraph from James Johnson's "Clearinghouse" column in Coin World which states that this writer reported that 17 specimens of cents with blurred obverse design and wire rim were found in parking meters in Woodward, Oklahoma, by the Chief of Police there. I examined these cents and they are not double or multiple struck and have nothing in common with the cents referred to in the above article. Further, they are Denver Mint products. An article on these particular errors will be sent to Errorgram after they have been more fully examined in an effort to determine the cause of said Mint errors.
